What do specific flowers represent?

Every occasion deserves beautiful flowers. Understanding what flowers mean will make it easy for you to select the perfect flowers right to the occasion such as, birthdays, funerals, graduation, weddings, engagements, anniversaries, and others as well.

What do specific flowers represent?

Sunflowers may symbolise adoration and bring happiness along with signalling the start of cosy autumn and Christmas looming in the distance. Alstroemerias are a symbol of prosperity but also friendship. Gerberas represent cheerfulness and smiles, adding a pop of vibrant colours in each flower bouquet.

Calla Lily and amaryllis are typically associated with beauty, while anthurium represents hospitality and aster is a symbol of elegance and daintiness. Sweet William is a flower representing gallantry, carnation is for fascination and the stunning peony is the ultimate symbol of happy life and happy marriage. It is perfect for your idyllic wedding bridal bouquet.

Tulips declare love and hydrangeas are the symbol of heartfelt emotions; they make a statement in each flower bouquet or arrangement. Orchids, on the other hand, represent exotic beauty and refinement. They make for the perfect flower or plant gift to someone close to you.

Finally, the rose is of course the great symbol of love. Unsurprisingly, the colour of the rose plays a huge role. Red roses say “I love you”; white roses represent purity and a fresh start; pink roses are for happiness; yellow roses symbolise friendship; and orange roses signal a new relationship. The symbolism of the rose also depends on the number. Three roses say that you love the recipient’s company; six roses symbolise that you are on the way to love; twelve roses are used to say “be mine”; and a Magnificent bouquet of baby roses mean that your love is limitless.

All these flowers are a great way to express your feelings and by now you are wondering where to buy flowers at the nearest place. Our online flower shop offers a range of flower bouquets and arrangements that are perfect for every occasion. Our delivery service is FREE & will bring your flowers straight to your doorstep.

Flower Givers Perceived as Successful and Caring

Happy birthday, congratulations, thank you, I love you, thinking of you. Each day, millions of gifts are exchanged by people who want to send thoughtful regards to deserving friends and loved ones. According to some research, the presents we pick to convey our special messages say a lot about us.

The gifts we choose say about who we are and whether they affect how we are perceived. The research reveals that those who send flowers, in comparison to other gifts, are viewed as successful, caring and emotionally intelligent people. More specific findings include:

- Both men and women who give flowers are perceived as happy, achieving, strong, capable, and courageous people.
- Men and women come across as more emotionally intelligent, they give the impression they can effectively express their feelings and take time to understand the feelings of others.
- Female floral gifters are viewed as more appreciative of beauty and nature.

These research findings show that you can influence and change what people think of you in a significant way through the gifts you give. That news is particularly important to those interested in enhancing friendships and romances, even business relationships.

Flowers have evolved to activate positive emotional responses from people. Each bloom has the potential to put a smile on our face and sway our opinion of a friend, colleague or loved one. Gift recipients experience compelling connections with givers, and the positive link is particularly evident in the exchange of flowers.

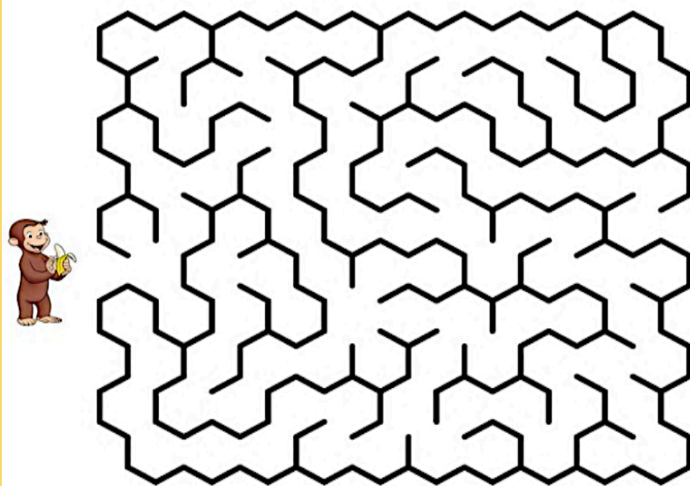

Think of no other item besides flowers that evokes such positive feelings and perceptions for both the giver and the recipient.

Where are the best places for flowers in your home and what types of flowers work best in certain locations? Any room of your home can be a sanctuary for a bouquet of freshly cut blooms. If you look at any other decorating magazines or by searching online, you will most often find flowers in the following rooms.

Living Room - Living rooms are probably the most classic location for flowers. Nothing adds colour and warmth to these spaces like flowers. Often people will put flowers on coffee tables or side tables as a focal point. You likely spend a lot of time in your living or family room. It is also the room most often seen by visitors. Unique and flashy flower arrangements work well in these rooms. Something like our Adelaide, Victoria and Lilium Love bouquets would be a great addition to a living room.

Bedroom - Visitors may not see your bedroom, but this is another good place to add flowers. Try flowers with soothing scents or appearance in your bedroom. Bedrooms are the space for relaxation and sleep, and a well-placed flower arrangement can add to that ambiance. Roses, especially in muted and calming colours, are a wonderful bedroom flower. Check out our Lady Margaret and Hemda bouquets for your bedroom. You don't have to consider all rose bouquets though. Mix sweetly scented flowers (like lavender and roses) with palms and ferns is one way to create a unique bedroom flower arrangement.

Dining Room - Flowers as part of a table's centrepiece are extremely common in-home decorating. This is a great location to put seasonal flowers. For example, an arrangement of summer flowers on a dining room table can make your home feel like summer. Similarly, autumn-themed or Christmas themed flowers bring in the ambiance of that holiday. And so on. The sky is the limit when you are planning your dining room flowers. Just make sure that the arrangement is not too large or if it's a bouquet not too high. You want to ensure that you can see people on the other side of the table.

Entryway - Yes, we know this one is not a traditional room. But think about it -the entryway is the first part of your home that visitors see. If you use this entryway often, that means you will also get to enjoy your flower arrangement constantly. Not all entryways are large enough to hold a huge bouquet of flowers. But even a small live plant like an orchid, succulent, or any other indoor plant will add some colour and life to the entryway.

Obviously, this was not an exhaustive list of where to put flowers in your home. Some people love to place flowers in their bathrooms. Orchids are an especially popular plant for the bathroom. Because they are tropical plants, they can handle the heat and humidity often found in these rooms.

Other popular rooms for flowers include the kitchen, guest rooms, and Outdoor area. We just recommend that you put your flowers in rooms where you can enjoy them too. You don't want to hide your freshly blooms bouquets away in rooms that you never enter. To reap the benefits of flowers in your home, make sure to be strategic about where you place your bouquets.

Seasonal Door Wreaths

CREATING YOUR VISION, YOUR STYLE

Front door wreaths are a festive way to welcome guests to my home and make a big impact on curb appeal. An autumn wreath is the perfect start to fall, and then the day after Thanksgiving, I switch to a winter one. I like to use a faux wreath outdoors, and a real one inside so I can enjoy the aromas of fresh herbs and botanicals.

I recommend purchasing a sturdy metal wreath hanger, from any local D.I.Y store, which can be used for any wreath in any season. Whether it's a faux or real wreath, most retailers advise that any outdoor wreath is much protected and last longer when placed under a sheltered area, protected from the elements. With a range of natural materials and styles, here are some amazing wreaths ideas to do in your free time or to find readymade.

Autumn - With red, orange, and yellow artificial leaves you can make up this autumn wreath, any door or mantel will immediately feel like fall. If it has an accompanying garland that you can drape on your mantel or on your door frame this would be phenomenal, and it really make the place festive.

Made from fresh olive and myrtle leaves this wreath is a summer bonanza. Who don't love their guests be welcomed with its delicious aroma. This wreath needs to be made by hand. It can be done on one Sunday family afternoon as a family activity. Its drying process is important, and you can hang up this wreath both indoors and outdoors and when its dried completely. Can last up to a year, when stored properly.

Dried White Oak Wreath is perfect for winter. Symbolizing peace, strength, and persistence, white oak leaves are incorporated with dried eucalyptus to create that wintery feel. Since this is made out from natural dried elements be sure to hang it indoors in a dry area, as any moisture can cause the colours to bleed.

Cypress Wreath its Simple and elegant. Artificial cypress wreath is subtle for winter and the holidays too. Accompanying this wreath with a matching garland that you can drape on your mantel or on your door frame for more festivity ambiance.

Artificial Eucalyptus wreath with Gold Bells & Champagne Ribbon Bow Wreath. Ringing in the holiday season, this wreath features gold bells hanged in the middle and with champagne ribbon bow for a celebratory piece of decor.

If it is Baptism, Birthday, Anniversary, Reunion, Hens, Bachelors, Graduation, Staff, Baby Showers, Private Functions or a Retirement party, whether a sit down meal or a stand up reception, we do it for you
